This training will allow participants who have completed a previous training in Motivational Interviewing to further develop their skills in applying MI. Using lecture and group practice, participants will expand on basic concepts, identify specific application for their work settings, and receive in the moment coaching for skill enhancement.

Candidates for this workshop should have a previous training in motivational interviewing and should be using MI in the current work setting, supervising MI or planning a MI project. The format of the course allows for a high degree of practice and individualized feedback. This workshop will provide a relaxed and informal environment for learning, with opportunities for professional networking with others using MI in a variety of settings. Class size will be strictly limited to 15 participants.

It is assumed that participants will have read the text, Motivational Interviewing, Preparing People for Change, Miller and Rollnick, 2002, Guilford Press prior to attendance.
